Mr. Heidner and family are at present with Mrs. and Mr. M. L. Noyes. Within a few days they will go to Springfield, Mass., where they will probably go to some place in the South, for the winter at least.

Llewellyn Bartlett, who has lived in South Paris most of his life, is now engaged in France in the railroad engineering corps sent over from America to build railroads there. Letters from him do not of course reveal his name, but they do show that he is stationed about eight miles behind the firing line. It is part of the work of that branch of the service to build and repair roads as they may be needed, and carry supplies and munitions to the front.

One good result of the change in location of a place of Western Avenue at the north end of the Paris Manufacturing plant, which was the getting rid of the noisy place in the road, where over the fault lies, there has for some years, in spring and wet periods, been a mudslide in the road at that place, which would cause the man on the street might have been abated by a little work digging an open ditch to drain off the water. However, the ditch is there, though none deep, and the road is crowned well, and a culvert takes the water under the road, so that it should be drier than in the past.

Two pieces of construction in addition to the plant are under way at the factory of the Paris Manufacturing Co. One is an addition to the rear of the plant, which will just double the size of the plant. This is built of brick, like the original building, and extends into the rear of the plant. The other, situated in the yard west of the lumber shed, is a dry house, 30 x 50 feet, which will be used for drying lumber to rot, and will have a good ground to it that can burn. A stone crusher and concrete mixer, together with other things which operate them, have been quite busy during the past few weeks.

A highly successful inauguration of the season was had by the Ladies' Social Union of the Universalist church at the latest supper and old folks' concert Tuesday evening. A good supper was served, which the man looking for the best dinner had and pumpkin and squash pies, with a variety of trimmings. It was necessary to set a second table for forty or more of the guests, and the number fed must have been about 350. Appropriate decorations mainly of paper, the stage was covered with the same. The stage was decorated with flowers. At a little after 8 o'clock the singing in the concert commenced and took their places on the stage. They were attired in antique costumes, perhaps not all strictly of the same period, but picturesque and interesting. There was an orchestra made up of Mrs. Agnes L. Morton at the piano, Miss Clara Dean and E. B. Dean violin, Allie Cote cornet, Frank Kimball clarinet, Clarence DeCoster, bass, and Miss Isola Pike, piano. The program was given last week was substantially carried out under the leadership of Professor W. S. Ripley of Bates, and both the old-time hymns and anthems and the modern or "worldly" songs received warm applause, and the program was much enjoyed. An additional feature was furnished by Leon Harlow of Boston, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Harlow of Paris, who sang "The Good Shepherd" and responded to an encore. Mr. Harlow's strong and well cultivated voice, and his excellent and well appreciated.

Work of Sheriff.

Following some picking of pockets at the West Oxford fair at Fryburg Wednesday, an unexpected party was arrested and now is awaiting a continued hearing, and three others eluded the officers and took to the woods.

Between half past five and six in the afternoon, Sheriff Harry D. Cole, South Paris and Deputy Sheriff Harry O. Stinson of Norway, who had been on the fair grounds during the day, saw at the Fryburg railroad station, looking for some man whom they had seen on the grounds. They saw four men down the track toward Fryburg, and went rapidly away from them for a while, and then turned and came back. When the parties met Sheriff Cole had some conversation with the men, and then came back to the station with him, showing his badge when they asked for his authority.

The men who were being killed and time waiting for the train which left about an hour, seemed unwilling to go with the officers, and the latter each took hold of one to enforce the command. The man whom Sheriff Cole took hold of wriggled out of his two coats, leaving them in Stinson's hands, and then he ran against the rail of the track. The man whom Sheriff Cole took hold of broke away, but Mr. Cole pulled his gun and fired, shooting but bringing each shot short.

The man ran a short distance, stumbled and fell, saying he was all in, and the officers secured him and put the handcuffs on him. The other three had meanwhile got into the cover of the bushes behind the track.

The arrested man was brought to jail, and the next day in the Norway Municipal Court, where he was charged with larceny from the person. On request of Sheriff Cole, the hearing was adjourned for a week, until Thursday of this week, to enable him to examine witnesses, and bail was fixed at $400. The prisoner was represented by Louis J. Brann of Lewiston. He expects to secure bail and be released some time Monday.

The prisoner gives the name of Frank Harris. When the officers talked with the men on the railroad track, they said they all came from Portland, but the connections seem to be with Boston rather than Portland. He had seventy dollars in currency in his pockets when arrested.

Tuesday night Deputy Sheriffs Shaw of South Paris and Davis of Bethel captured at Gilead an Overland car containing four people, three men and one woman, all Lithuanians, and eighty-eight quarts of whiskey. The next day in the Norway Municipal Court two of the men paid each a fine of $100 and costs for illegal transportation. The other man and the woman were discharged. They were represented by George H. Hutchins of Mexico, and John Wikstrom of Bethel. The automobile was libeled, the hearing to be held on the 10th.

Hearing in Assault Case.

There was a referee hearing at the court house Saturday before Justice A. M. Spear in the case of Tazilio Zanolli of Bangor vs. William P. Cyr of Bangor and Louis E. Small of Mexico, in an action of trespass. Bernard A. Bove and Jacob H. Berman of Portland, the plaintiff, George H. Hutchins and Ralph T. Parker of Bangor for defendants.

The date of the alleged assault is Sept. 20, 1916, and the plaintiff alleges that late in the evening of that day the defendants, who were then deputy sheriffs, came to the Zanolli house on Pine Street and demanded entrance, and were finally admitted by Mr. Zanolli, husband of the plaintiff. In the writ it is declared that the defendants "with force and arms in and upon said plaintiff did make an assault and beat the said plaintiff and then there brute, violent and ill treat and place in great fear mentally by making wanton, abusive, violent, outrageous, profane, blasphemous, disgraceful and insulting remarks, epithets and oaths applying the same to the plaintiff and continuing the same until the plaintiff, who is a man of peace, was unable to stand, and he was then taken to the jail, where he was confined with a child only then five days of age, suffered greatly in consequence of the alleged assault. Damages are placed at five hundred dollars.

No actual physical assault is charged, the damages resulting from the violence and the conversation of the defendants with her and her husband, and its consequences to her in her weakened condition.

The contention of the defendants is that the suit to the Zanolli house with a search warrant to search for liquor, but did not exceed their powers, and that the suit to the jail was for a long space of time, to wit: for the space of thirty minutes.

It is also declared that the plaintiff, being then in a precarious condition, confined with a child only then five days of age, suffered greatly in consequence of the alleged assault. Damages are placed at five hundred dollars.

Good Pair of West Oxford Society.

UPHOLDS ITS REPUTATION GAINED BY MANY FINE EXHIBITIONS.

Barring the rain of Thursday which interfered with attendance and the day's events, the fair of the West Oxford Agricultural Society, which was held last week, was a worthy successor of the long line of fairs of that society, and it drew the patronage which such a show should have.

The society is particularly fortunate in having such a place for its fair—a practically level deep place of ground in the valley of the Saco, of more than sufficient area for any country fair, and well adapted to its purpose. Nor need it be considered solely from the utilitarian qualities, the aesthetic instincts may also have play; for looking across the valley one's eye rests upon a magnificent line of mountains at only a few miles' distance, with Keegan's mountain, whichever name you tolerate, rising high into the blue and dominating the scene.

Two days of good weather favored the society on Tuesday and Wednesday, before the clouds began to gather, and the people came to the fair in numbers. While the fair is not so near any large center of population as some of the others of the state, that fact makes little difference in these days. On Wednesday the spacious grounds were filled with people, and the fair was a success.

From all over western Maine and some of New Hampshire they came, and there were numerous cars from other states. The show was the largest crowds that has ever been seen on the grounds.

Protein Foods.

Since protein is one of the most important food elements which the body needs and in most forms is expensive, housewives should take particular care in the selection of food rich in protein in order that they may provide this substance in their diet economically. Specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The principles underlying the choice of such foods are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 824, "Foods Rich in Protein," recently published by the department. Protein, the bulletin points out, is the only form in which the very important element nitrogen is found. "No human body," the bulletin, "is absolutely necessary for the building and repair of body tissues."

FOODS IN HIGH PROTEIN

The best known foods rich in protein include meats, fish, eggs, milk, cheese, legumes, nuts, etc. The proteins of the different foods vary somewhat in character. It does not make much difference from which source the protein is obtained. The important thing is to get the supply of protein, though a variety of kinds usually is considered desirable. In the case of children, however, milk is the very best source of protein.

Housewives may solve the problem of furnishing the needed protein of the economy, says the bulletin, by learning how much protein is provided by the different kinds of food and then choosing the kinds which will furnish what the family needs for comparatively low cost and with little waste. For the assistance of housewives in making such comparisons, tables giving the amount of protein in a pound of various protein-rich foods, and also the percentages of protein in the different foods are included in the bulletin.

RELATION OF PROTEIN TO HEALTH

In discussing the relation of the protein food consumed to bodily health, the bulletin points out that healthy persons should not make the mistake of assuming that it is necessary to measure their food as carefully as a doctor measures his medicines or even the food which he prescribes for an invalid. If the body is in good condition it adapts itself to the ordinary variations in the food supply. The danger comes when, day in and day out, the body gets too much or too little food, or when the kinds provided are not the most suitable. While there is no need to measure exactly how much protein is obtained with every meal, if the diet as a whole is to be healthful and economical the person who plans it ought to know in a general way how much protein and other nutrients are needed and how much is contained in the different food materials, and then choose accordingly. The bulletin contains recipes for the preparation of economical diets rich in protein.

Six-in-one Cake.

This simple recipe for cake, which is easily memorized, can be varied in many ways. It is one that I can recommend to the hostess when unexpected guests are to be entertained at either luncheon or tea, because it is reliable and can be depended upon in an emergency. I know whereof I speak, for it has served me well for nearly forty years.

1 cupful sugar
1/2 cupful butter
2 cupfuls flour
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
3 or 4 eggs

Milk enough to make a batter, not too soft.

The sugar and butter should be rubbed to a cream; then add the whipped eggs. (It is well to beat whites and yolks separately if you have time, though good results can be obtained without doing so.) Then beat in the flour, that has been previously sifted with the baking powder, and add the milk as you need it. With this mixture as a foundation the following cakes, and many others may be easily made by varying the flavoring and icing.

PLAIN CAKE

Mix as above, flavor with vanilla or grated lemon rind and sprinkle granulated sugar over the loaves before putting them in the oven. This is very nice when served with fresh fruit.

STRAWBERRY CAKE

Bake the cake mixture in two layers. Make a soft icing with powdered sugar beaten up with a little milk, and spread on the layers, and also on the top of the cake. Then place the strawberries cut crosswise between the layers and on the top of the cake. Strawberries may be used in season, and you may substitute whipped cream for the icing, if preferred.

DATE DROP CAKES

Stir into the cake batter a liberal allowance of chopped dates. Bake in small cake pans. They may be served as plain cakes or may be covered with a chocolate icing made as follows:

2-3 cupfuls of granulated sugar
1 square unsweetened chocolate
1 tablespoonful butter

A pinch of cream of tartar
Boil till it makes a soft ball in cold water. Take from the stove, flavor with a little vanilla, beat until it thickens, and spread on the cakes.

COCONUT GEMS

Add to the cake batter one cupful of shredded (or grated) coconut. Bake in small cake pans, and sprinkle with coconut on the top of the little cakes, before putting them in the oven.

CHOCOLATE SPICE CAKE

Add to the cake batter one square of unsweetened chocolate, melted, and one heaping teaspoonful of cinnamon, and a half teaspoonful of allspice. Bake in two loaves.

If you use four eggs for the cake you can keep out the white of one for the icing. Throw a little powdered sugar on the unbeaten white, and begin beating it. Then add a little cream, and so on. When it is stiff enough to spread on the cake without running off, add a teaspoonful of melted butter and a little vanilla. This is just better for the loaves.

DAINTY DESSERT

Bake the cake batter in two loaves. Make a custard as follows: Put a half pint of milk on the stove, while it is heating beat the yolks of two eggs with two-thirds of a cupful of granulated sugar. Add to this a heaping tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold milk. With the milk to heat to a boil, take it off and pour it into the eggs and sugar slowly, beating all the time. Set back on the stove and stir until it thickens.

Cut the cake in this slices, two for each guest. Lay one slice on the other, spreading the custard between as filling. Whip the whites of the eggs stiff, beating in some jelly, and pile on top of the cake. You will need an extra egg white if you have more than four guests.

The custard should be made some time before serving, so that it may get cold. But the whites of the eggs should not be beaten until the last minute.

The Youthful Church Attendant.

My husband and I have always approved of the old-fashioned custom of taking the children to church, believing that the atmosphere of worship impresses itself upon the minds of the youngsters at an early age. I have even in this day of short sermons my young son would often become restless. We hit upon the plan of keeping a book of illustrated Bible stories in our parlor. Often the sermon is taken from the life of a Bible character with whom the boy is familiar. He takes delight in turning the pages of his book until he comes to the picture illustrating the subject, and showing them to us with great pride.

Soup Seasoning and a Tea-Ball.

In adding pepper-corns and other whole flavorings to soups that are not to be strained, it is a good plan to drop the tea-ball into the soup. It may be removed before the soup is served and the seasonings with it. All the whole flavorings that are used in soups, such as peppercorns, bay leaves, etc., may be dropped into the soup. It is not often that responsibilities are handicaps. They are usually the incentives that spur one on to their best efforts in thought and action.

Wood Waste, 36,000,000 Cords.

There are more than 45,000 saw mills in the United States, and their output of waste in the form of sawdust, shavings, and other wood refuse is estimated as 36 million cords per year. This is equal to over 4.1 billion cubic feet of waste, which the capacity of a bin one-half mile high with a base covering a forty-acre lot. Or, considering each cord to contain eighty cubic feet of solid wood with all the cracks and air spaces taken out, these 36 million cords would make a block of wood more than a quarter of a mile on each edge.

Perhaps one-half of this so-called waste product is not strictly speaking wasted, but serves a useful purpose as fuel under the boilers. Much of the remaining 18 million cords not only serves no useful purpose, but in most cases is a source of inconvenience and danger, and costs the mill time and money.

Saw mill waste is disposed of in various ways. Some go to the local markets, some to the main mills or to wood distillation plants. Shavings and hog cuttings, as well as other mill waste, are sometimes used to fill low places in the woods, or to make a good method of getting rid of waste is by burning either in a fire-pit having an open fire which sometimes has a protecting wall on the side towards the mill, or in a burner enclosed on all sides and having a spark-arresting screen at the top and a fire grate near the bottom. In both cases some kind of a conveyor is necessary to bear the waste from the mill to the fire. This is usually a sort of trough with a metal bottom along which a slowly moving chain or cable, equipped with cleats and buckets, carries the waste to the fire.

A closed burner and conveyor costs about $12,000 for a mill of a hundred thousand feet daily capacity. Forty per cent of the larger mills, cutting more than 50,000 board feet daily, are equipped with closed burners. Forty-five per cent have fire-pits. The remainder have neither and dispose of their waste in some other way.

It is estimated that for a mill of one hundred thousand feet capacity the cost of conveying the waste from the machine where it is made and destroying it in a closed burner is 42 cents per cord or $10.05 per day. Burners seldom bring in any revenue, although in a few cases where they are sold for fertilizer, and in a number of others the burner furnishes hot feed water for the boilers.

Both burners and fire pits add to the insurance rates on lumber, and in the case of the pits on the mill itself. In order to reduce the fire hazard to zero, in the case of the burners, it is necessary to keep all lumber piles at least one hundred and fifty feet away from the burner. The matter is much worse in the case of pits, especially the open ones, which must be kept three hundred feet away from the mill and five hundred feet away from any lumber piles. When nearer than these distances from the mill and yard respectively, the insurance rates mount up rapidly with closer proximity until they become practically prohibitive when the fire-pit is nearer than one hundred feet.

No well managed mill would produce waste if it could be avoided. This, however, is not possible, the most feasible thing is to seek out some method of utilization of the waste so it will pay for its disposition. The Forest Service is working out a plan, but has not yet found a satisfactory solution.

If people's good qualities and kindly deeds were advertised with the same persistent headlines and "special editions" that their bad now are, we would be a better and happier people in a more wholesome world.
